Should religious issues decide who wins?

Frank Jackson, Sociology, 617 Mass.

I think religion should have some part because people do what the church tells them. However, the church should not force its views.

Mike Fagan, Management, 85 Independent

A lot of religious issues are political. If you're a Catholic, it's not right because they aren't practicing Catholics and they might not practice religion. Should we be forced to put our religion on hold?

The Student Angle

Mark Murphy, Sociology, 617 Mass.

I don't think religion or politics should be involved if the church is going to criticize government. It shouldn't be on abortion but on social justice.

Awareness of policies needed

The problems I'm most concerned about include: the housing situation, the food service, and the parking situation. I feel that the administration is not doing enough to address these issues.

Apple picking — perfect fall pastime

by Rosemary Carter

The sun was up, the blue sky above, the weather perfect for a fall outing. With the leaves falling, the air crisp, the idea of picking apples was irresistible. With the family in tow, we headed for the orchard, eager for the taste of fresh, juicy apples.

The orchard was bustling with activity. Children were climbing trees, picking apples, and laughing. Families were enjoying the harvest, savoring the taste of the sweet fruit.

We picked our share, filling our baskets with red, juicy apples. The smell of apple cider wafted through the air, making our mouths water.

Back at home, we baked apple pies, ate apple crisps, and enjoyed the fruits of our labors. It was a perfect fall pastime, one that we looked forward to all year long.
