TO MAKE IT TODAY YOU NEED A COLLEGE DIPLOMA, NOBODY GOES
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I was interested in the recent editorial in the Journal discussing the lack of Summer Jobs for students. As a graduate student, I have been looking for ways to supplement my income during the summer months.

Some suggested options included internships, freelance work, and teaching. I am considering applying for an internship in the field of my study, as it would provide valuable experience and networking opportunities. Additionally, I am exploring freelance writing and editing as a potential source of income.

However, I have noticed that many employers are requiring graduates to have prior experience in the field they are hiring for. As a recent graduate, I feel that this is a significant obstacle for finding employment.

Another concern I have is the lack of opportunities for teaching. While I am interested in teaching, I am not interested in teaching at the high school level. I believe that higher education institutions should provide more opportunities for teaching as a viable option for students.

In conclusion, I appreciate the Journal's efforts to address the issue of Summer Jobs for students. I hope that the Journal can continue to provide information and resources to help students navigate this challenging time.

Sincerely,

RE: Life in the Soviet Union

I was interested in the article about life in the Soviet Union. As a student of political science, I find this topic very intriguing.

From what I have read, the Soviet Union appears to have a very different way of life compared to Western countries. The article mentions the lack of freedom of speech and the censorship of information. I am curious about how this affects the daily lives of the people living there.

Additionally, I am interested in learning more about the education system in the Soviet Union. How does it compare to the education system in my country?

I appreciate the Journal's efforts to provide information about this topic. I hope to learn more about the Soviet Union in the future.

Sincerely,

Commentary

By Wendy Sanford, Campus Writer

The recent events in the Middle East have raised many questions about the future of the region. As a member of the editorial board, I believe it is important to discuss these issues.

One concern I have is the role of the United States in the region. Many believe that the US has been too interventionist, while others argue that the US should play a more active role.

Another issue is the role of oil in the region. The recent increase in oil prices has raised many concerns about the stability of the region.

In conclusion, I believe it is crucial to have open and honest discussions about these issues. I hope that the Journal can continue to provide a platform for these discussions.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]
